Lake Wallenpaupack Scenic Boat Tour and Shohola Falls

We will start by stopping to view Shohola Falls. This magnificent waterfall, seventy-five feet wide and fifty feet tall, showcases nature's breathtaking power. The constant flow of water cascades dramatically, leaving spectators in awe, even during drier seasons when neighboring falls may run low.

Afterwards, we will experience a breathtaking 50-minute guided tour of Lake Wallenpaupack. During this tour, you will discover the rich history of this stunning lake region and learn why it has become a popular year-round destination. Marvel at the Lake Wallenpaupack Hydroelectric Dam, observe local wildlife such as Ospreys, Blue Herons, and Bald Eagles, learn about the various fish species that inhabit the lake, explore the Shuman Point Natural Area, and visit Eply Island, one of the four islands on the lake. The tour is led by a fully qualified captain/tour guide and includes life jackets for your safety.

Lake Wallenpaupack is a freshwater lake located in northeastern Pennsylvania. It is the third-largest lake in the state, boasting fifty-two miles of shoreline, an impressive length of thirteen miles, and depths up to sixty feet. Established in 1926 by the Pennsylvania Power & Light Company (PP&L) for hydroelectric power and flood control, it is now recognized as a premier recreational destination in the Pocono Mountains. Please note that the Scenic Boat Tour will cover approximately one-third of the lake during the scheduled time.

Shohola Falls

The eastern view of the Falls. The Walk down to the falls is short but rocky and steep. Due to recent rain, the trail can be muddy, and in high water, the spray of the falls may wet you.

Shohola Falls is located along Route 6, 10 miles northwest of Milford, Pennsylvania, in State Game Lands 180. State Game Lands 180 is an 11,000-acre protected area dominated by Shohola Marsh Reservoir and its surrounding marshes.

Shohola Creek flows into the lake and then out at the dam on the lake's northeastern corner. Shohola Falls is just below this dam. The dam does not affect the waterfall's flow, as it often flows during the drier months.

This constant flow of water travels over Shohola Falls, an impressive waterfall seventy-five feet wide and fifty feet tall. It is incredibly powerful and beautiful. The sheer amount of water that flows over this waterfall, even when others in the area are low, is awe-inspiring.

The Shohola waterfalls can be viewed from three sides thanks to a 90-degree turn that the creek makes just below the bottom of the falls. The best views are from the ledge directly in front of the waterfall, giving you a head-on view of the waterfall from about twenty feet above the water.

If you decide to go out on this ledge, use extreme caution. It is only a few feet wide in places and slants slightly downward to the water. The ledge is frequently wet with spray from the waterfall, making it quite slick in places, especially when it gets icy in the wintertime.

The ledge can be accessed from the eastern side of the waterfall. This area offers the quickest access to Shohola Falls and the ability to see a side waterfall that flows when water levels are higher on the main waterfall.

The opposite side of the falls can be accessed from a parking lot directly off Route 6. From here, it is a short walk along an open field to a trail that leads you along the water to several stone observation points. While it takes a bit longer to get to the waterfall from here, these observation areas provide nice vantage points for those who do not want to get too close to the water.

How to Get to Shohola Falls

Shohola Falls is located along Route 6 in Pike County, Pennsylvania, ten miles west of Milford. After following directions to Shohola Falls, PA, there are two parking options for seeing this waterfall.

The eastern side of the waterfall can be reached from a parking area off Brooks Road, just after the bridge, if traveling east. While this road might look like a private road, it also leads to the state game land's parking area. The coordinates for this parking area are 41.390504, -74.969160. The directions below bring you to this location.

Follow the parking lot trail that heads downstream for just a minute or two. To access the narrow ledge, follow the trail past the large rock as the trail goes downhill and then uphill to the ledge. Again, if you go out on the ledge, please use extreme caution, especially if you get wet.

To reach the western side of Shohola Falls, turn just before the bridge over the creek (if traveling east) and park in the state game land's parking area immediately after it to your left. When you enter the parking area, park in the far-left corner of the lot. The coordinates for this parking area are 41.391771, -74.971643.

From there, walk through the open field towards the lake and the dam. Near the water's edge, you should see a trail heading into the forest and downstream. Soon, you will come to a stone wall and two observation areas.
